MARTY WALSH

The mayor talks about Southie's St. Patrick's Day parade, making the city appeal to a younger crowd and the death penalty for the Boston Marathon bomber.

STILL 'GETTING ADJUSTED'

Metro sat down with Mayor Marty Walsh at his City Hall office for a wide-ranging interview in which he talked about the controversial South Boston St. Patrick's Day parade needing to be "inclusive" and supporting the death penalty for the accused Boston Marathon bomber if the Department of Justice seeks it. Below are excerpts from the interview. For more, visit www.metro.us.

What's been the hardest part of the job so far?
Probably just getting used to so many people around me. ... And when I say people, I don't mean public, I'm talking like staff. Great people work here, but just trying to get adjusted to that is one of the things — I have to get used to it in private life, I guess.

During the campaign you said a way to make Boston more attractive to young people is having bars and restaurants open later and upgrading online services. What's your team doing to make that happen?
A couple ideas on the campaign were to zone, zone some of the entertainment venues, the bars. One particular part of the area, somebody gets to stay open later. ... Some people have come up with ideas of stop serving alcohol at 2 [a.m.], 2:30, but have dancing till 3:30 [a.m.] so it staggers the spill out into the streets. We're going to look at all those options.

TV time

When you get home after a long day at the office, or on a long weekend, what do you do to relax? What do you do to just decompress?

I haven't figured that out yet. I turn the news on to see if there's a snowstorm coming. And when there's no snowstorm coming I feel very relieved. Seriously. I mean I watch some sports if there's a game on. I'll watch NHL Network or ESPN or watch basketball. I obviously love my home teams, but I'll watch other teams play as well. And then [I] have to read briefings for the next day from here [City Hall]. I don't have my routine down yet. It's still early.

Quoted

"I would like to march in the parade. I want to march in the parade. Certainly I've marched in the parade in the past. It celebrates my heritage. A million people or so come into South Boston and into the community to watch the parade. It's a great parade, but it has to be an inclusive parade."

Mayor Marty Walsh
On the South Boston St. Patrick's Day parade

For five of the newest rental buildings in Boston, which are about 1,000 units, the cost is at least $2,000/month for a studio apartment, and they only get more expensive from there.
We really have to figure out how do we catch that moderate income housing here in Boston. That's something that as we move forward here we'll be working on. ... We have to create housing to keep people in the city of Boston. ... [A] two-bedroom [for] $3,500, that's a lot of money. We have to really work on how do we capitalize on that housing, as well as creating low-income housing.

You already said you're not going to march in the St. Patrick's Day parade, obviously a flash point for gay rights.
Yeah, and I haven't had a chance yet to sit down with the organizers of the parade. ... I would like to march in the parade. I want to march in the parade. Certainly I've marched in the parade in the past. It celebrates my heritage. A million people or so come into South Boston and into the community to watch the parade. It's a great parade, but it has to be an inclusive parade.

You said it has to be an inclusive parade. They've been pretty steadfast and have the court order.
They do and that's the right. That's the Supreme Court ruling and the people of South Boston 20 years ago fought hard for that ruling. In the last 20 years a lot in this country and a lot in this city has changed. I think that, with anything, I've changed in 20 years. I'm a different person today than I was 20 years ago. So I think change is good and I think sometimes we have to adapt with change.

Less than two weeks is the deadline for the Department of Justice to inform the judge if they want to seek the death penalty for accused Marathon bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev. Do you think Tsarnaev should get the death penalty?
I'm going to support whatever the ruling is. In my career as a legislator I've voted consistently against the death penalty. I'll support whatever the Justice Department decides in this case.

Former Mayor Thomas Menino declared the car is no longer king in Boston. Do you subscribe to that same philosophy?
Yeah. ... There clearly has to be other ways of transportation. We have to continually work with the MBTA to upgrade our service. ... There's a program in place now with our transportation to do 20 miles of bicycle [track lanes] in the next 10 years. And walking as well: Walking is an important piece. You go to other cities around the country, people walk. They don't think twice of walking 15 blocks to go to work, so I think we can look at walking as well. We have to make sure the infrastructure is there for that.

You live on Savin Hill, really close to the Savin Hill T station. Would you ever consider ditching the car and taking the T to work?
It would be a nice idea, but very difficult. You're always in and out. It makes it hard. It would be hard to take the train everywhere. Most of my days have been ... sporadic. It's just important to have a car. ... It's just very difficult because you're going from event to event in a very tight time.

Truck spills fluid after crash into water along I-93

Dangerous drive. A dump truck caused massive delays along the expressway.

A dump truck traveling on Interstate 93 in Dorchester overturned and landed in Dorchester Bay Monday morning, creating major delays along the Southeast Expressway.

The crash occurred just after 10 a.m. near the Dorchester Yacht Club, state police and the Boston fire department said. The driver apparently lost control, went through the I-93 northbound guardrail and the vehicle landed on its side in the water.

The driver suffered a minor injury.

It took heavy-duty tow trucks more than five hours to get the truck, which was hauling gravel, out of the water.

Police closed the two right lanes of I-93 during the incident. The cause of the crash was not immediately clear.

Fluid spill

State transportation and environmental crews also responded to the scene. The truck leaked about 50 gallons of fluid, the fire department said.

- Most of the fluid that spilled into Dorchester Bay, or Savin Hill Cove, was not diesel fuel, but was brake, transmission and hydraulic fluid, officials said.

Convicted killers

Prosecutors: New penalties for juvenile killers

State prosecutors are calling on Beacon Hill to ensure juveniles who commit first-degree murder spend at least 35 years behind bars.

Massachusetts District Attorneys Association President Jonathan Blodgett on Friday wrote legislators saying that victims' families were "devastated" by a high court ruling that all juveniles convicted of first-degree murder be eligible for parole after 15 years.

"They are now subjected to the possibility that their loved ones' killers will be released," Blodgett wrote. SHNS

Gender identity. Court rules Kosilek should get state-funded sex change

A federal appeals court has ruled that the state Department of Correction should fund a sex change operation for an inmate suffering from a gender identity disorder.

Michelle Kosilek, 63, who was born a man, has been taking hormone treatments to become a woman. She is currently serving a life sentence in an all-male prison for murdering her wife in Mansfield more than two decades ago.

On Friday, the U.S. First Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston agreed with a 2012 lower court ruling that the DOC must provide the surgery as treatment for Kosilek, and that not doing so violates her Eighth Amendment rights.

The DOC challenged the ruling on the grounds that denying the surgery shouldn't be considered inadequate medical care.

Boston schools seek minority faculty members

Diversity. BPS has seen a drop in minority teachers in recent years.

The schools want teachers who are more reflective of the student body. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

The Boston Public Schools system wants a more diverse faculty, reportedly as a response to a decline in the number of black teachers.

Interim Superintendent John McDonough recently announced a "Teacher Diversity Action Plan" to attract and retain "a highly qualified, diverse teaching force" that better reflects the school system's student body."

"The goal of this plan is to find teachers who are linguistically, culturally and racially diverse, who reflect the diversity of our student population," McDonough said in a prepared statement.

By the numbers

4,415

Number of teachers in the school system

The system has a predominantly white faculty. Of 4,415 teachers, 21 percent are black, 10 percent are Hispanic and 6 percent are Asian, according to BPS. Among the student population, 40 percent are Hispanic, 36 percent are black, 9 percent are Asian and 2 percent are multicultural or "other."

The Boston Globe reported Monday that BPS is in violation of a decades-old federal court order requiring that at least 25 percent of teachers be black and 10 percent "other minorities."

The lack of compliance puts the school system at risk for further litigation.

Christie deputy denies linking Sandy funds to development

New Jersey's lieutenant governor on Monday denied a claim by the mayor of Hoboken that Gov. Chris Christie's administration linked the release of superstorm Sandy relief funds to approval of a Hoboken development project.

Hoboken Mayor Dawn Zimmer says Lt. Gov. Kim Guadagno warned her that Christie would withhold disaster recovery funding if Zimmer did not support a bid by the New York-based Rockefeller Group to build on several blocks in Hoboken.

His spokesman has dismissed the Hoboken mayor's claims as false, as did Guadagno on Monday at a public appearance in Union Beach, N.J.

"Mayor Zimmer's version of our conversation in May of 2013 is not only false but is illogical and does not withstand scrutiny when all of the facts are examined," Guadagno said. "Any suggestion that Sandy funds were tied to the approval of any project in New Jersey is completely false." REUTERS

Civil rights

What would MLK champion in 2014?

Visions of what Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. would do to promote civil rights in 2014, had he not been slain decades ago, marked speeches and commemorations held across the country to honor his memory on Monday.

Recalling King's famous "I Have a Dream," speech, Atlanta Mayor Kasim Reed said the late civil rights leader would want school children to hear it as a call to stay in school and become educated to better the world.

"We need to swap the lesson plan for a dream plan," Reed told a crowd at Ebenezer Baptist Church gathered for the Martin Luther King Jr. Day federal holiday.

He said King would want children to hear: "You are not going to school just to study math, you're going to school to be somebody."

In New York City, newly elected Mayor Bill de Blasio, swept into office promising broader opportunities for poorer residents, said at a tribute: "Dr. King would tell us we can't wait" to bring income equality to New Yorkers.

At the packed Atlanta church near the Martin Luther King Center, which promotes his philosophy of non-violence, King's daughter Bernice was applauded for her call to honor his message by making Monday a "no shots fired" day in the wake of school shootings and other gun violence across the nation. # Blue Ivy Carter visited Sunny Obama

The great thing about 2-year-olds is that glamour doesn't exist for them. Sure, it's great for a baby if her parents are huge pop stars who hobnob at the White House, but the No. 1 item on her agenda is still "Doggy doggy doggy."

Beyonce visited said White House this weekend to perform for Michelle Obama's 50th birthday, and she brought Jay Z and their daughter Blue Ivy along for the ride. Blue, clad in cat ears and a white tulle gown that I would have murdered for when I was little, got to watch her mom perform, according to the photos posted on her mama's Tumblr.

But could any of that compare to the sublime fuzziness of Sunny? Beyonce posted several adorable snaps of Sunny and Blue making friends.

Maybe, instead of renting out a zoo and buying her a miniature Porsche for her second birthday last week, Jay and B should just have gotten Blue a puppy. MELINDA TAUB

This is what Depp's midlife crisis looks like

If I were Vanessa Paradis, I wouldn't be too pleased.

While Johnny Depp shared 14 years together — and two children — with Paradis, he always maintained marriage wasn't that important to him. "I never found myself needing that piece of paper," he told Extra in 2010. Well, apparently he's changed his tune, as Depp, 50, has reportedly proposed to girlfriend Amber Heard, 27, according to People magazine.

"They couldn't be happier to be engaged and excited to share the rest of their lives together," a source says. Depp and Heard, who met while filming "The Rum Diary," went public as a couple shortly after he split from Paradis in 2012.

Way to have a midlife crisis, Depp, and get married to a woman 23 years your junior. What's next — a sports car? Hair plugs? Even more exotic man-jewelry?

Gary Shteyngart's big successes

See more at www.metro.us

Memoir. The novelist's new book is called "Little Failure," but his own reinvention is far from it.

Gary Shteyngart will be at the Brattle Theatre on Jan. 23 at 6 p.m.
BRIDGETTE LACOMBE

Novelist Gary Shteyngart introduced his new memoir, "Little Failure" in a big way: with a book trailer starring James Franco, Rashida Jones and fellow author Jonathan Franzen. The trailer was a big hit, and the memoir itself has been receiving rave reviews. The author of 2010's celebrated "Super Sad True Love Story" took some time to answer a few questions about his Hollywood connections, the relative aging rate of Russian men and what it's like to reinvent yourself as an American.

How did the trailer with James Franco come about?
Well, he was a student of mine, and I thought it would be nice to make out with him for a while on camera. I mean, it's a dream that many people of all sexual orientations have, and he was kind enough to say, 'Yeah, I'll wear the bathrobe.'

There were many, many takes on this, and then we finally settled on one that was pretty sexy, I thought.

You were forced to make out with him over and over again.
Let's say he was forced to make out with me. For me, it was pure pleasure.

What made you decide to write a memoir?
It was time. I'm 41, and in Russian years that's 67. How much more time do I have left? I had a kid of my own and I thought it would be nice to figure out what my upbringing was like, so I don't [repeat mistakes] but also keep the humor and love. I feel like I've been working on this material for a long time and I want to use it so I can move on to other stuff that maybe doesn't involve as many Russian Jews.

There's a lot of reinvention that's happening along the way in there.
That, I think, is native to my other novels. There's always the sense of reinvention that people undergo, or suffer, if you want to put it another way. No one is ever happy with being who they are. But that's a great trope in writing fiction, in general. That's the question: If you have people who are static, then why write about them?

LISA WEIDENFELD
letters@metro.us

Q&A

While you were writing the memoir, was it ever hard to decide which stories made sense as a part of the general narrative?
I woke up every morning and before writing thought, I'm 9 years old. What's the world going to look like for me today? ... There were periods of my life that I felt were real triumphs. I discovered Manhattan and went from being a provincial Yeshiva boy to a kind of worldly Manhattanite, but even that transition was very difficult. It required a loss of a lot of things that I loved.

Deals. "Hotel Impossible" star Anthony Melchiorri wants you to stay over on the cheap.

CASSANDRA GARRISON
cassandra.garrison@metro.us

There are countless ways to save money on hotel rooms these days. But if you're not looking on Facebook and Twitter, you're missing out.

Expert hotel fixer and host of Travel Channel's "Hotel Impossible," Anthony Melchiorri says that more hotels are turning to their social media accounts to sell last-minute rooms or offer freebies publicly to showcase their customer service.

It's the savvy ones who get them first, so read on to learn how to scoop up those digital deals.

1 If you're not already following hotels and airlines on Facebook and Twitter, you should be. "No one buys hotel rooms on social media, but it is a platform. A lot of them post good deals they allow you to claim on their website," Melchiorri says. "You 'like' them because they may have special deals. If they have a promotion, you can be part of that."

2 Don't sit back and wait — make the first move. "I always tell guests or friends to go on social media, let them know you are coming, look for a deal," he advises. "By letting them know you are coming, it allows you a free upgrade potential, so it's a great way to engage them immediately, and too many take it for granted."

3 Practice fast-finger shopping. "I think speed is a main factor; it's gotta be fast," he says. "A lot of hotels don't do it well — you might not get an answer for two days — but you should."

4 Look for last-minute deals. "If a hotel was doing Facebook and Twitter right and they had last-minute deals, they might do $99 for tonight," Melchiorri says. "They are dumping inventory at the end of the night or the day before, and they can really drive a lot of business. You will see last-minute deals that no one else can get."

Season four of "Hotel Impossible" premieres Jan. 27 at 10 p.m. on Travel Channel. / TRAVEL CHANNEL

FREELANCE: FREEDOM FROM AN UNCERTAIN ECONOMY

By the numbers

40%

Percentage of American workers that will be freelancers by 2020, according to prediction by Intuit

See more at www.metro.us

Gone are the days when you could rely on one source of income to survive. Secure, full-time jobs are scarce — the economy is too unpredictable, and there are many external factors that you can't control (such as your company going into bankruptcy or eliminating your department).

Amid all this uncertainty are corporations that aren't hiring, even though they are making more money. And just because you work at a well-respected company doesn't mean you're protected from unpredictable layoffs. For instance, Macy's is laying off 2,500 employees, Merck is laying off 8,500 and Cisco is cutting 4,000. These layoffs happen with alarming regularity.

In this kind of employment climate, you need to have multiple sources of income. The best way to accomplish that is by having an entrepreneurial mind-set. Think about career diversification the same way you think about managing a portfolio of stocks. If you put all of your money on one stock and it plummets, you are broke and living with your parents. On the other hand, if you invest in a series of stocks across various industries, you are more balanced — and if one tanks, you can stay afloat.

Although freelancing can be difficult, it is the easiest path to career diversification — and it's becoming more and more popular. Intuit predicts that 40 percent of American workers will be freelancers by the year 2020. With freelancing, you can take on multiple clients; then, if you lose one, you can still survive. Aside from the benefit of freedom and flexibility, it diversifies you in a way that protects you from economic uncertainty. If you work for a big corporation, you should be doing side projects (such as freelancing) just in case you get laid off. You can also parlay your entrepreneurial activity outside of work into a full-time job if you concentrate enough effort on it.

Diversifying your career is the smartest decision you can make because it gives you the upper hand in your field and is your best insurance plan against things that you can't control.

If your company doesn't have policies against it, consider diversifying your career by freelancing on the side. / COLOURBOX

Stand up and keep America great

America means "greatness." I want my country to be the best. We are a nation of leaders, not followers. I can not stand to watch my fellow Americans sit on the sidelines and watch this great country slip away into mediocrity.

Every individual has a gift to make a difference, large or small.

We must not tolerate lies and excuses from all our pathetic politicians.

Please, everyone get up off your couch and speak out against all the injustices we have endured through the last decade. Enough is enough.

Raising our standards

Re: 'Follow the money' (Metro, Jan. 16) Letter writer David Snieckus points to the Federal Reserve. However, this system did work until first President Franklin Delano Roosevelt removed the gold backing from each dollar. Kennedy decoupled the silver as a reserve supporting the dollar and then President Lyndon Johnson did away with silver coins by signing the 1965 Coinage Act — an act that had gone unchanged since 1792. Johnson boasted of the event, commenting on the 172 years it had been honored and respected. Today the coinage and paper money have a value, but ask yourself: Would you prefer a pocket with coinage of real value or a pocket with bonded alloys of aluminum and copper? And never let someone tell you this doesn't matter.

Belichick takes verbal swing at Welker for hit

NFL. The Broncos receiver "took out" Aqib Talib in the second quarter of the AFC title game.

If there were any question as to what kind of relationship Patriots head coach Bill Belichick and former Pats receiver Wes Welker currently have, Belichick answered it Monday, a day after New England's 26-16 loss to Denver in the AFC Championship game.

Belichick slammed Welker at his Monday press conference regarding the receiver's hit on cornerback Aqib Talib on a "pick play."

"I feel bad for Aqib, the way the play turned out," Belichick said. "I went back and watched it, which I didn't get a chance to do [Sunday]. It was a deliberate play by the receiver to take out Aqib. No attempt to get open. I'll let the league handle the discipline for that. It's not for me to decide, but it's one of the worst plays I've seen. And that's all I'm going to say about that."

A look at Wes Welker and Bill Belichick through the years:

- In 2011, Welker was benched for making joking remarks about Jets head coach Rex Ryan.
- In 2012, Welker told CSNNE, "It's kind of nice to stick it in Bill's face once in a while."
- Welker told SI in 2013: "[Playing for Belichick] is one of those deals where you have to endure him, put up with him."
